THAT'S A JOB?

I Like ANIMALS

... what jobs are there?

PET ADOPTION COUNSELOR

Animal rescue centers look after abandoned, stray or sick animals, and try to find new homes for them. I began working at New Start Animal Rescue Center five years ago as a volunteer. After college, I took a job as a pet adoption counselor, to help match people to their perfect pet.

The rescue center where I work cares for dogs and cats, but other rescue centers look after rabbits and horses, or large animals like horses and donkeys. These animals might have been hurt and need to be taken care of.

1
The first person I see when I arrive at work is the vet. She's checking over our new arrivals. A little dog we've named Mabel. He's a mix (meaning he's a mix of different dog breeds) and he was brought in yesterday by an animal's owner who either forgot to pick him up or report an abandoned dog wandering around town.

2
I wash and wait as the not-vaccinated Welser. Do protect him from disease and check that he doesn't have fleas or worms—it's important that parasites don't spread among our animals.

5
After lunch, I speak to a couple who would like a cat. They already have three puppies at home, so I need to think carefully about the best match for them. I wouldn't want to send a nervous kitten home with three lively dogs! I talk to another meeting and start a list of possible matches.

7
The last job of the day is saying goodbye to Ruby, a friendly tabby cat who is leaving with her new owners. I've matched her with a family with two young children who will love playing with her. I give them some advice about looking after her and wave them off. It's a happy ending to another busy day!

MY JOB: BEST AND WORST PARTS
BEST: Helping animals find a new home is the best part of the job.
WORST: Sometimes every animal can be returned.

What do you want to do when you grow up? Children who love animals can find out all about potential future careers, from veterinarian to zookeeper to pet portrait artist, as they're taken through a "day in the life" of 25 different animal workers!
